Avenue Improvement Delayed by Decision

Superior Judge J. A. Bardin of Monterey county has rendered his decision in the long discussed Ocean avenue controversy, which will make it necessary for us to continue to apologize for the disgraceful condition of our main thoroughfare, for a time at least. The following extracts from Judge Bardin's decision uphold the protestants in every legal technicality:

"Unfortunately the street law of our state is yet largely in a formative condition and, while many of the basic principles governing this very technical branch of the law have narrowed down to reasonable compass, new questions are constantly arising which must often depend for their solution upon the exigencies and circumstances of each particular case.

"While it is true as suggested by learned counsel for the defendants that the law relating to street improvement should not be frittered away by sustaining objections to trivial irregularities and slight negligent omissions, yet the property owner may demand that all material requirements of the law be followed.

"The court is not and cannot be actuated by any desire to either aid or thwart the proposed improvements on Ocean Avenue. Nor can this court even inquire into the wisdom or expediency of making the proposed improvements, or say whether the plan of proposed assessment is just or unjust; nor whether the plans of the board of trustees are meritorious or the opposite. All such matters have been committed into the hands of the legislative branch of the municipality of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

"I am well satisfied that failure to give the required notice in order to constitute due process of law, arose in at least two particulars, namely

"(1) In the failure to post and publish the notice required by the act where there was contained a description of the exterior boundaries of the assessment district; and

"(2) The failure to post the required notices along the thoroughfares of the municipality.

"As to this last omission I may parenthetically state it must still remain fresh in the minds of the parties that the testimony of Mr. Newberry was direct, positive and unequivocal as to the failure to post notices within the required statutory distance along at least two thoroughfares. The testimony of Mr. England was very general, and in view of his own frank statements as to a possible departure from the requirements of the statute as to posting in all instances along the street and not upon the private holdings of the property owners, must yield to the positive testimony of other witnesses in the case.

"Whether or not any property owner was mislead or not properly advised as to the steps contemplated by the board of trustees, is beside the question.

"I am satisfied that the official grade of Ocean Avenue was legally established by resolution numbered 32 of Carmel-by-the-Sea, and that the criticism against it is without merit.

"It seems clear to me that the levy of the assessment against all of the real property in the assessment district, the boundaries of which are identical with the city limits is void, independent of any question as to whether or not the requirements of the state and federal constitutions as to due process of law have been fulfilled.

"It is urgently claimed by counsel for the defendants that the plaintiffs have already had their day in court and that this controversy has already been decided against them. But my views of the case are such that I must determine otherwise."

A copy of the complete decision is on file at the Pine Cone office and may be seen on application.

Trustees Meet Tuesday

The special meeting of the Trustees which was held Tuesday evening was adjourned after a brief discussion of matters pertaining to fire protection. Many of the opponents to the Ocean avenue improvement were present, although no reference to street work was made. The Board will meet again next Tuesday evening.

Pine Needles

Walter Albright, son of Mrs. August Englund, is visiting at the family home for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Fenton Foster of San Francisco are occupying the new Seideneck cottage for two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Glassell have purchased the Daisy Fox Botick house, on Lincoln street near Twelfth.

Mrs. Isabelle Morse will occupy the Acacia cottage on Seventh street and Dolores avenue during July and August.

Work has been commenced on the Ada Howe Kent residence at Carmel Highlands. The Kent family are from Rochester, N. Y.

They will be a Parish Tea at All Saints Rectory tomorrow (Friday) from 3 to 5 o'clock. All visitors are cordially invited.

Roger W. Ball, one time Carmel resident, now residing in San Jose, was here for a day early this week. Mrs. Ball is visiting in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Thane of San Francisco and Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Robinson of Gilroy will spend the summer on the shores of Carmel Bay.

Mrs. H. D. Newell and family of Chicago are occupying the Gordon cottage, on Lincoln avenue, for the summer and have Mrs. Mary Joy Cullimore as guest.

Estelle Heartt-Dreyfus and Louis Ernest Dreyfus, well known Pasadena artists, will leave the southland shortly for Carmel, where they will spend the summer.

Two plays will be given tomorrow night at the Civic Club in Pacific Grove. "The Old Peabody Pew" and "Dat Famous Chicken Debate" will feature the program.

Phil Whiting has returned to Carmel from the East, where he has been identified with theatrical activities. Mr. Whiting has assumed his annual duties with the Forest Theatre.

Mrs. J. Arthur Elston, wife of Congressman Elston, was a Pine Inn guest from Berkeley over the week end. It is Mrs. Elston's plan to build a summer home in north Carmel shortly.

Mrs. Robert W. Bernard and her children, Jeanne and Robert, are here from New York for the summer. Mrs. Bernard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McKee, and wife of a prominent attorney.

Al C. Joy of Fresno, former sporting editor of the San Francisco Examiner and at present identified with the Raisin Growers' Association, was a Carmel visitor last week. Mr. and Mrs. Joy motored from Fresno with a party of friends to Monterey, where he addressed the Electrical Convention.

A telling presentation of the progress of Christianity in Japan will be given at 3 p. m. Wednesday, June 22, at the Presbyterian Chapel, corner Eighth avenue and Dolores street, under the auspices of Carmel Missionary Society. Friends and strangers are most cordially invited.

Dr. C. A. McCollom is en route to St. Louis, Chicago and Minneapolis for a stay of several months.

Mrs. A. C. Wyckoff of Berkeley is a Carmel sojourner, occupying the new Hamlin cottage in the south-end.

The Carmel bath house is open for the summer, and is under the management of Walter M. Basham.

Several members of the Ezekial family were here from Mill Valley over the week-end. They motored down in two cars.

All eyes are on Friday, June 24. This popular day with the young folks will mark the closing of the schools for the summer vacation.

R. B. Bell and family of Oakland were visitors here last week. Mr. Bell is an attorney. The family contemplate building a summer home here.

Perry Newberry announces that his stay in Pacific Grove will extend only until such time as Mrs. Newberry's health will permit their return to Carmel.

The illustrated lecture for this month at the Carmel Church will be given Sunday night at 7:45. A fine set of slides on China will be shown. Every one invited.

Miss Alice Sickles, impressario, associated with Selby C. Oppenheimer, was a Carmel visitor last week. Later on she may promote several concerts here.

Mrs. Roeding and daughters of San Francisco are here for two months, occupying the Collis house. Mrs. Roeding was a frequent visitor here before her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Duane were among our week end visitors. Mr. Duane is a San Francisco attorney for many years connected with the San Francisco Examiner.

Carmel is soon to have another "Tea Room," located on the street floor of Ocean avenue in Pine Inn. The room is being tastefully decorated and will be open to the public within two weeks.

James Lawson, son of Mrs. A. C. Lawson, sailed on the Steamship Wolverine from San Francisco last Saturday to study imports and exports relative to the sugar industry. His mother, Mrs. A. C. Lawson, is planning a visit to France within the near future.

The Columbia Park Boys' Club of San Francisco, which for many years camped in Carmel are now in Pacific Grove, 120 strong. E. D. Grace, well known here, is in charge of the summer camp, where visitors are welcome. The boys will give an exhibition in Carmel during the camping season.

The Junior Club met Tuesday evening, twenty three out of twenty five being present. There is to be a beach supper later, the boys with younger brothers, inviting them. Those without, inviting one boy who is not a club member, each boy providing the supper for himself and guest. Those on the waiting list are included.

Carmel Hydrants Almost Useless

The fact that Carmel's fire hydrants are almost useless was developed by the local fire department and a detailed report presented to the City Trustees at their meeting on Tuesday night.

Carmel's fire chief and his assistant made a series of pressure tests on Sunday morning, at a time when the pressure should register the maximum, and developed the startling fact that our hydrants are little more than decorations.

Trustee George M. Dorwart was selected to represent the fire department figures to heads of the Monterey County Water Works in the first move to provide Carmel with an adequate water supply. The detailed fire report follows:

Result of static pressure tests on fire hydrants of the City of Carmel, tests conducted June 12, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 10 a. m. Instrument used, a Shaffer & Budenbear static pressure gauge of 250 lbs capacity:

Hydrant, Ocean avenue at Junipera, 18 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Ocean avenue at Mission, 15 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Ocean avenue at San Carlos, 16 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Ocean avenue at Dolorss, 15 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Ocean avenue at Lincoln, 26 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Ocean avenue at Monte Verde, 30 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Monte Verde at Seventh, 33 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Monte Verde at Eighth, 25 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Monte Verde at Sixth, 20 lbs pressure.

Hydrant, Monte Verde at Fifth, 20½ lbs pressure.

As 80 lbs is considered a minimum pressure for effective fire fighting, it can be seen that the above test shows a very unsatisfactory condition; the minimum pressure recorded, 15 lbs, would scarcely fill a line of hose 500 feet long, and the maximum pressure of 50 lbs would give a very weak nozzle delivery through the same length of hose.

The average pressure of all hydrants is 24½ lbs, which is less than one-third of the standard working pressure.

In view of the above facts we urgently recommend that immediate steps be taken to have the pressure in the fire mains brought up to standard and so give Carmel's Fire Department an adequate weapon for the coming fire season.

J. E. NICHOLS,
Chief of Fire Department.
B. W. ADAMS
Assistant Chief of Fire Department.

ART NOTES

Joseph and Elizabeth Robins Pennell, devoted biographers of Whistler, are presenting an exhibition of Whistleriana in the Library of Congress, which represents a culling from the thirty years' collection made by these artists.

The six hundred items represent only about one-third of the collection, including sketches, drawings in pen, pencil and chalk, a couple of dozen lithographs, some five dozen chosen etchings from Paris, Thames, and Venice sets, with two glimpses of the early Coast survey days.

The Pennell catalogue is of real literary interest, containing many a characteristic thrust in annotation. These clashing encounters with which the story of Whistler's life, fairly bristles—the law suits, the controversies with Wilde, Swinburne, Leyland—the whole practice of the gentle art of making enemies is here documented. As a record of the work and doings of an artist, this is probably unparalleled. The testimony indicates abundantly that in his intercourse with others, Whistler could, when he chose, conduct himself with an exquisite charm.

The artist, as Whistler conceived him, is a beatific creator. In such art there can be no problem of evil. Beauty is its sum and substance. The creative art is merely nourished by the pageant of nature. Whistler's art confirms the glory of the privilege of sight. As a figure of the times he is only incidentally the painter. In the method by which he established himself for all time among the eccentric worthies of England, he was most American. Whistler's readiness to fight, the cruelty of his quick tongue, were only badges of an abnormal sensitiveness. A master draughtsman he was, with the needle in design by line, or in impalpable and economized shading; Whistler had no need to go to Japan for his taste; he came up the Thames in the evening mist in which "the whole city hangs in the heavens." Whistler's great project was beauty, at a time when Art's project was edification, and threw the weight of his ultimate prestige to a mischievous theory that subject was essentially immaterial; fortunately for himself, no man was ever more carefully served in subject, no man's subjects were ever so solicitously perfected.

Twenty-four new paintings by Victor Charreton are on exhibition in New York. This artist delights in the massed effect of a polychrome, haphazard beauty, as in the crowded flowers of a garden, or in the autumn foliage of a bit of woods. He disposes his colored lights as skillfully as a stage director. His brilliant coloring and nice fidelity in observation of landscape make his pictures interesting in artistic values.

The youngest exhibitor at the London Royal Academy exhibition this year was Eileen A. Sloper, aged fifteen. Miss Sloper is the daughter of George Sloper, a well-known English etcher, and she has had no regular tuition. In "The Swing" two children are portrayed one in the swing, the other swinging him—such a natural pose, such well-sustained action, and such a fine comprehension of light and shade seems quite remarkable in one so young.

Sir William Orpen, whose picture, "The Man from Aran," created so much interest this past season, has hung at the Royal Academy in London a portrait of Eugene Grossriether, chef of the Hotel Chatham, in Paris. It seems Sir William Orpen found such good chaps there that he has made their cook famous in the portrait of the year.

The newly organized Junior Art Patrons of America which arranged the exhibition in the galleries of the National Academy of design, may be said to have gathered a "retrospective exhibition" beginning with John Smibert, predecessor of Copley and Stuart, and following painting in America down to the present time. Each member of this society is committed to the yearly purchase of not less than twenty-five dollars' worth of art.

At the Mesnard Galleries in New York this week, an exhibition of paintings by Charles N. Sarka, is being held. Mr. Sarka is a painter whose travels yield an inspiring harvest of colors; his recent group of sketches in Porto Rican waters created much interest. This exhibition includes a group of Moorish pictures and paintings of scenes in Tahiti and the Hawaiian Islands.

Roerich, the Russian painter, who recently exhibited at the Kingore Galleries, has created a sensation at the Chicago Art Institute. This artist shows an old race with its religion of emotion, its physical simplicity; a race with deep faith, with curiosity, with many passions, suspicions and fears.

In all his paintings you feel the stupendous power of his nation and its longing for a profounder understanding. His love of color is overpowering—all colors, the most tender, loving chords of color, the most brilliant jewel-like tones, the most mournful, tragic half tones—all the variety of the Russian temperament unexpectedly brought together. Remisnov, one of the old Russian poets, defines Roerich's color in painting:

> His blue is the blue of Northern twilight,
> His green is the green of the sea-grass,
> His red is the red of bon-fires:
> And his flame—from Byzantine arrows.

One of the prominent Boston artists relates that while painting in an open field one day a rustic came up and stood watching him. Presently the fellow remarked, "Purty clever you be, mister, a painting' two pictures at wunst. But I like the one you got your thumb through best."

"The Studio Year Book of applied Arts, 1921," contains a liberal amount of excellent material. This book, issued every season, gives particular attention to fine homes, architecture, decoration and interior designing. It is filled with pictures and plans which make one wish to be wealthy enough to establish such homes as are depicted.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Kuster have returned after a month in the Sierras. They are fitting up their new home on Monte Verde street, where they will be at home to their friends after next week.

Mrs. Peter J. Gordon and Miss Pelly, who occupied the Acacia cottage for fifteen months, have left Carmel for a visit in Los Angeles, and from there will proceed to their home in Ohio.

A day for "Americanization" meeting for Monterey county will be held in Pacific Grove Civic Club House next Saturday at 2:30 p. m. An interesting program will be followed by a social half hour. Mrs. A. C. McGraw, Monterey county chairman, has extended an invitation to all members of the Arts and Crafts Club.

William Hickman Pickens, director of the Los Angeles speedway, and one of the greatest promoters in the country, is a Carmel visitor. "Bill" Pickens discovered and developed some of the world's greatest celebrities. Barney Oldfield, Omar Locklear, Lincoln Beachy, Katherine Stimson and De Lloyd Thompson are just a few of his prodigies. Mrs. Pickens and children will remain in Carmel for the summer.

Mrs. A. D. Signor hopes to have Rancho La Playa, Carmel Valley, open July 4. An open-air dance will be given on the arrival of the Godwin boys; Harrison is expected in July. A farmer dance will follow, and all guests will attend in farm attire. The hunting dance will call for horses and red coats. These dances will be invitational and chaperoned by Mrs. Signor.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

REGULATION—PLUS

With Western States legislating against the cigarette, and the Anti-Tobacco League but one of a number of moral bodies determined upon "regulating," the future holds rich promise of variety for the interstate tourist, writes Arthur H. Folwell in Leslie's. States were once wet or dry, according to the temper of their special laws.

The Pullman porter's confidential warning, "If yo' all want any mo' drinks, gents, yo' better order 'em now, kase we'll be over in ——— in haffen hour," has still a recent ring and tho stilled for the moment by constitutional amendment, the porter's voice may again be heard in the land in this manner:

"If yo' all wants any meat fo' dinner, gents, yo' better place yo' orders now. Be over in Illinois in twenty minutes an' dat state's done gone vegetarian, Can't serve no meat after crossin' state line, gents."

And, of course, the trainboy with his package-goods:

"Fresh mixed and broken candy! Chocolate peppermints an' extra sour lemondrops! 'Last call for candy! No, ma'am; can't sell no confectionery after passin' into Utah. State's gone anti-sweet."

Likewise, the insinuating waiter in the diner:

"Demi-tasse? No, sah. Can't serve no coffee while goin' thru New Jersey. Can't bring yo' none till we gets over in Pennsylvania. Anti-Coffee league ain't got Pennsylvania yet."

These examples will suffice, tho others might be added. "Representative" legislatures, under the lash of moral lobbies, will no doubt enact additional laws. A tourist traversing the United States five years hence will find himself subject to many new forms of regulations, all designed to conserve his health and general well-being, if not his liberties. A certain amount of differing opinion will be, of course, inevitable, and some States, doubtless, will be more "liberal" than others. Possibly Illinois will bar only red meats, permitting lamb and chicken to be served.

Maine may become strictly vegetarian, with beefsteak carried on the hip, or served craftily in certain low dives beneath an innocent layer of mashed potatoes and turnips.

As to candy, Utah may prohibit cream centers and allow nut-centers to be sold, while Kansas, noting sugar's vicious habit of fermenting, may taboo candy altogether, and make its sale or purchase a state's prison offense.

All the foregoing deal with stuff for the inner man, but beneficent regulation may not stop with him. We may have sleeping car conductors thus addressing a tourist in the Pullman washroom:

"Sorry, sir, but you can't wear those B. V. D.'s in Montana until the fifteenth of May. Better hop back to your stateroom and put on your winter weights. Not got any with you? Then stay in bed till the train gets over the line into Idaho."

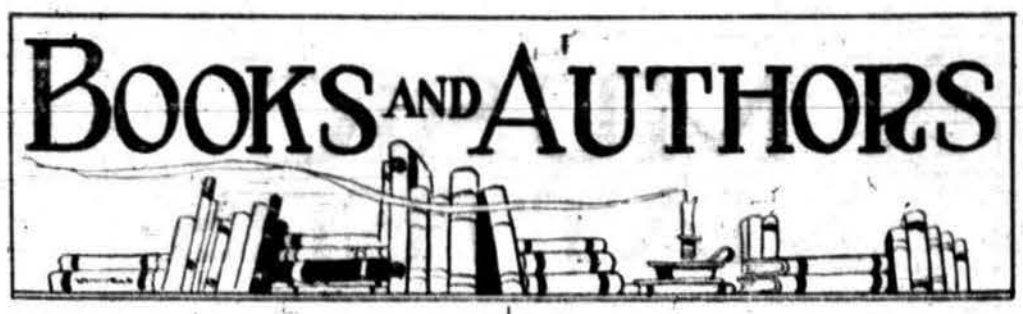
BOOKS AND AUTHORS



"Essays Before a Sonata," by Charles E. Ives. Mr. Ives, who is both a writer and a composer, has presented his impressions, using both mediums. He has written an irregular sonta which gives impressionistic pictures of Emerson and Thoreau, a sketch of the Alcotts, and a scherzo supposed to reflect a lighter quality which is often found in the fantastic side of Hawthorne, and a series of four essays corresponding to the movements of his sonata. These essays, the composer says, were written for those who cannot stand his music—and the music for those who cannot stand his essays; and to those who cannot stand either, the whole is respectfully dedicated.

"Play the Game," by Ruth Comfort Mitchell. Distinctly a story for young things to whom the universe is a background for romance. It centers about Honor Carmody and "Jimsy" King, between whom a boy-and-girl friendship has existed. This is strengthened by their high school days with the lad performing marvellous exploits under the eye of his admiring sweet heart. Hono's mother frowns on the attachment because of a taint of drunkenness in the King family. Jimmy, with the help of his little skipper, as he calls Honor, conquers the inherent craving and sails safely into port.

In Coningby Dawson's "The Kingdom Round the Corner," the author chooses a theme very similar to Locke's "Mountebank"; a man of low degree enters the war as an humble private, and, through unsuspected talents, rises to the rank of Brigadier-General, is received on his merits in the most exclusive London houses when on leave and until he is demobilized after the war is over. He is then summarily dropped, not only by the army but by society, which promptly abjures democracy and returns to pre-war standards.

Probably no better picture has been made of the chaotic social and mental conditions induced by a long war than this book of Mr. Dawson's.

Braithwaite, the ex-valet, says bitterly to Sir Tobias, who personifies caste, "You cheered us and jeered us into going because you were frightened; you handed us white feathers if we hesitated; you promised that if we would share our lives with you, you'd go fifty-fifty with us on your financial security; there was no time to draw deeds of agreement; we took you at your word, and what a lie it was.

"You talk about the brutality of war; it's not a patch on the brutality of peace; you treated men's lives as yours while the danger lasted, but you insist that your possessions are your own now that it's been averted. You re-assert your privilege to despise us."

The Spanish publicist, Louis Araquistain, has written a new book called "El Peligro Yanqui" The Yankee Peril. It is an elaborate indictment of the aggressive materialism of America, "the young giant."

The author quotes a great deal from Waldo Frank's "Our America" in support of the theory that this country is materialist. The Monroe Doctrine and recent Central and South American history are cited in proof of American imperialism and concludes with a warning to remember the fate of Napoleonic France, of Spain, and of imperial Germany.

"Tawi Tawi," Louis Dodge. This story ranges widely, beginning near Eagle Pass, on the Mexican border, with two young men in love with a Spanish girl who is unable to decide which one she loves, and ending on a remote islet in the Philippines. Mr. Dodge handles his remarkable personalities with a subtelty and sureness akin to Stevenson but without Stevenson's perfect sense of proportion. Aside from its merits as a story of adventure, the tale has real value in its development of the two men's characters, their interplay and realization of each other.

"Alice Adams"—Booth Tarkington. A story of one of the familiar figures of the American neighborhood. Alice is not the most highly colored of Tarkington's portraits, but is one of the most satisfying, because she is never forced. She is the "flapper" grown old enough to be skeptical of her illusions. Her father, a clerk grown dull in loyal service, and her mother, a woman who wears herself and her family out by trying to give it all she dreams it should have.

Alice's useless and entirely delightful brother, Walter, is a realist escaped from the family romance into shooting dice and general "low living." There is not much plot to the story—Mr. Tarkington is not a creator of plots; his stories are simply agreeable pathways over which the comic spirit hovers. In "Alice Adams," the path steps down sharply into a hapy ending, and altho Alice loses everything but her courage, the ending is not illogical.

Charles E. Chapin's story—written in Sing Sing prison, has just been published. It is the unembellished life history of a true newspaperman, told with that unerring "news sense" and that knack for turning up incidents of wide human appeal without which Mr. Chapin could not have remained city editor of the New York Evening World for twenty years. This book is as the author intended it, a "human document," pulsating with that intangible force that drives the makers of a newspaper.

MUSIC MATTERS

Anna Case, the well known California soprano, sang at Shreveport, Louisiana, in the great state fair grounds, a short time ago. She was greeted by a large audience whose enthusiasm was in keeping with its proportions. The singer was in her most charming mood and best voice and these statements when applied to this captivating soprano infer the superlatives of winsome personality and exquisite vocal art.

Miss Case's program was well selected, ranging from the classic purity of the "Monteverde," "Lamento" from "Ariana," on through the modern romantic school of writers, to the interesting group of present day composers. In the aria from "Boheme" and the waltz song from "Romeo and Juliet," Miss Case displayed a perfection of vocal art that called forth tumultuous demonstrations from her hearers. Her interpretation of the smaller numbers was daintily intriguing and received with a spirit that indicated genuine pleasure.

At the recent annual convention of the California Federation of Music Clubs, their President, Mrs. Cecil Frankel, gave a most interesting talk on the power of the federation for good in influencing public school music. Mrs. Frankel said:

"It is here we must look for our future musical audiences, artists and composers. Every child has the right to demand the same opportunities and we must turn our attentions to the rural schools that the boys and girls there may have at least some of the musical opportunities of those in our city schools.

"Those of us who were fortunate enough to be present at the May convention must have a keener appreciation of what is being done by our youth under these wonderful men and women. Club members should visit the schools and become acquainted with the teachers; they may need instruments for an orchestra, it may be phonograph records, or an artist's program for appreciation classes—and club members may help to get them."

David Alberto has placed Carmel on the itinerary of his American tour, and the music lovers of Monterey Peninsula will have an opportunity to hear this remarkable pianist in his recital at Arts and Crafts Hall on Friday evening, June 24. Mr. Charles Alexander Warfield, who is arrangiug the American tour, claims that Carmel's standing in the music world will soon bring all the great artists to this district.

The century-old traditions of the famous French opera ballet are about to change, and a new school of rythmic dancing is being introduced, based on the principle of the Jacques Dalcrose eurythmics. Several American girls in the ballet are likely to be chosen for the permanent rythmic ballet of the national opera. Heretofore those admitted to the opera ballet had to pass through successive stages of toe dancing, which was a severe school, lasting a number of years and offering only doubtful assurances of admission to the first rank.

Mlle. Jesmin Howard, who is directing the ballet, spent two years as a teacher of eurythmic dancing in New York.

The occasion for the new dancing is the revival of two operas by Berlioz, "The Trojans" and "The Siege of Troy," which will soon be produced. The music of Berlioz is growing in popularity.

The Los Angeles music critics are enthusiastic in their praises of Vasia Anikeef, basso, and Thomas Vincent Cator, composer, who made their debut at the Gamut Club Theatre a short time ago, before a large audience composed of over three hundred people, including such well-known musicians as Olga Steet, the great pianist, Mariska Aldrich, Estelle Hart-Dreyfus, and Gertrude Ross, the composer.

Mr. Anikeef's phenomenally deep voice is handled with the delicacy of a coloratura, as one critic said: "His tone is superbly free, is well rounded and in a certain range the resonance is of startling calibre. He has a strong dramatic instinct, and in "Ay Oukhnem," the song of the Volga boatmen, sung without accompaniment, showed splendid breath control and continuity of tone." "The Linden Tree," "Song of the Russian Laborer," "Lullaby," "Cossack Love Song," and others, all Russian folk songs, were striking in their originality and combined with the beautiful voice of this talented singer, made this concert outstanding in the season's offerings.

Thomas Vincent Cator wrote the accompaniments to these songs whose adaptations were similar throughout: "The Kiss" and "The Dream Child" being songs of his own composition. Mr. Cator as soloist, gave his own piano number, "Tone Etchings of Carmel," an intensely interesting descriptive piece, and the Sonata in Memoriam, revealing much poetic feeling and rare musical comprehension.

The concert version of Goulod's "Faust" given last Tuesday evening at Stanford University by the collegiate musicians, under the direction of Warren D. Allen, was a production with which the student body may well be satisfied. The student chorus was accurte, finely balanced and clearly intoned, especially the Kermess chorus, which was sung with a vigor and freshness that would make many a professional reading lose by comparison. The University orchestra was augmented by a score of players from the San Francisco Symphony.

Maude Fay sang the lines of Marguerite with dramatic effectiveness, her clear voice, supple phrasing and forceful personality making her characterization most persuasive. Robert Battison, the lyric tenor, sang "Faust" and Marsden Argall, Stanford's promising young baritone, sang the part of Valentine most agreeably. Alexander Bevani was Mephistopheles, and his very promising young pupil, Nona Campbell, took the roles of Siebel and Martha.

This production revealed sound musical material responsive to the efforts of a capable director, and there is basis for prophecy of greater things to come.

Carmel Firemen Win

With City Trustee Reardon leading the rooting from the Carmel section of the grand stand the Carmel Fire Department baseball team hammered out their first victory of the season last Sunday afternoon. The newly-formed organization of Carmel Carpenters were defeated by an 8 to 7 score.

The battery for the Carpenters was composed of two former members of the Firemens' team, who were released by manager "Happy" Hoehn in a commendable spirit of sportsmanship in order to make it possible for Carmel to have two teams in the Peninsula league.

Alfred Rico, who did the pitching for the winners is one of the best hurlers in the league, and every effort should be made to co-operate and build a fielding team around him, which will be sure to bring next year's pennant winners from the Carmel fire department.

System Used in Handling Work in Del Monte Launrdy

One of the first and most essential things for the modern steam laundry is soft water. In this respect we have a very happy situation, our water containing but 6 per cent. alkali and as clear as crystal.

All bundles received in the marking department have a laundry list on each package with name and address and all instructions. The bundle then goes to the markers whose duty it is to count and list each article on an automatic counting and listing machine, making a duplicate ticket for each package; then the electric marking machine, which puts the laundry mark on each garment. These machines are accurate. All articles are then sorted and made ready for the washing. All silks and woolens and delicate garments go to the hand washing department where they are carefully washed and sterilized, using only ivory soap. The heavier pieces go to the washing-machine department, where the goods are washed in cylinder-type machines of the finest manufacture, again using the finest quality of soap, and all articles are thoroughly sterilized.

We are now ready for the ironing department. All flat work, sheets, pillow cases, towels, etc., are ironed by being passed through a cylinder-type of machine known as a flat-work ironer, which dries and finishes the goods, giving a soft linen finish. We are equipped with two of these large finishing machines, which are especially built for ironing this class of work, and are considered the finest type of machine made for this purpose.

In our shirt and collar department we are equipped with machines of the most modern type, being operated by electricity and compressed air, each machine ironing a portion of each garment, such as cuff ironers, neckband ironers, collar ironers and special shapers, etc.

All delicate garments and starched pieces go to our hand-ironing department, where we employ only the best of skilled ironers. After ironing, the goods are all inspected before folding. They are then sent to the distributing room, where they are assorted according to their laundry marks and carefully double checked by the original laundry lists by experts in this class of work. The bundle is now complete and ready for the driver to make deliveries.

We employ only the best of skilled labor in all departments. This is especially true of our heads of the different departments, they having had years of experience and are very efficient.

The Del Monte Company has spared no expense in the purchase of equipment for their laundry, and have one of the finest plants in the west, with plenty of daylight and ventilation.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Clare Eames' portrayal of the Queen in Drinkwater's "Mary Stuart" was, it is said, quite remarkable for its poise, variety, plastic grace and intelligence. She is at all times the Queen Some reviewers have said that in the pasionate scene with Bothwell, Miss Eames was cold, too austere, forgetting that a Queen does throw herself about incontinently like a wanton. There is a certain hauty reserve about this actress that does not necessarily imply lack of temperament; the line "I am wiser than my blood" in this scene explains the apparent coldness, for as a conscientious artist Miss Eames does not seek to improve upon the author.

Darnley, a splendidly drawn figure, false to friend and foe alike, is acted by Charles Waldron with an almost perfect sense of its necessities and opportunities.

The Provincetown players of New York have announced the building of their new theatre for next season, with specific and most interesting details of construction. The Provincetown players propose to take up the status of a repertory theatre, financing the venture through a $150,000 corporation popularly subscribed. The theatre planned will be superior to the ordinary American playhouse, embodying the strong points of the best Broadway houses—new sources of light and devices for the swift handling of big scenery. With these, it fits in the best European inventions, for new scenic effects and develops several important new ideas suggested by the six years' experience with their three little stages in Provincetown and MacDougal street. In addition to the four sections of the first playhouse, which can be tilted into any hillside slope, tower or terrace, it will have a new structural invention which makes it possible to raise the curtain and give the play in pure space. There are four sets which will combine into one deep set. They will separate into three stages to be used in swift succession of changing scenes, and so restore to the drama its Elizabethan power of story telling.

The latest of New York organizations to promote community drama has its headquarters at the Art Center, is called The Inter-Theatre Arts Club, and is planning to establish an Arts and Crafts Theatre. This club is comprise dof a workshop group of professional workers, in the inter-theatre arts, or arts which play a vital part in the preparation of the production of plays. Their aims are:

To foster and encourage the educational aspects of inter-theatre arts; to develop and encourage the growth of a high standard in the craft side of theatre art, especially in connection with non-commercial dramatic groups endeavoring to demonstrate with their own productions; to become a medium for original work in play-writing, designing, construction of settings, dyeing textiles, and all that goes to the mounting of a play; to encourage the bringing to New York of the best original programs from little theatre workshop groups in other cities.

Among the charter members is Mabel F. Hobbs, dramatic director, Community Service Inc.; McElbert Moore of the Harvard Workshop, musician and play-writer, and Rhea Wells, stage design artist.

"Clair de Lune," the play in three acts, written by Michael Strange and acted by John and Ethel Barrymore, is said to be an extreme absurdity—a tenuous, disjointed, uninteresting, wholly inconsequential play indebted largely for what slender plot it has to Hugo's "L'Homme qui Rit." John Barrymore appeared as Gwymplane, the young aristocrat, whose face has been mutilated in childhood, by scheming relatives, and who has become the associate of gypsies. Dea, the blind girl, who, unable to see Gwymplane's deformity, loves him for his nobility of soul. The action drags lamentably, and what comedy there is, is artificial—a really amateurish effort on which the talents of the popular Barrymores are sadly wasted.

"The Crier by Night," Gordon Bottomley's first play was written twenty-one years ago and produced in the fall of 1916 by Stuart Walker's Portmanteau Theatre Company. It was said that its dialogue was "modulated with such infinite legitimate variations as to make the blank verse perhaps the most delicate of our time." It is one of the most powerfully eerie poetic dramas of the supernatural that have been written.

"Laodice and Danae," written in 1909, was followed by "The Riding to Lithend." "King Lear's Wife" was published in 1913 and now for the first time, all the plays have been gathered together in a complete edition. There is a splendid artistic austerity about this work as well as a constant, foreboding quality that is almost Celtic. This can best be explained, perhaps, by quoting from Blanid's song in "The Crier by Night:"

The bird in my heart's a-calling through the far-fled, tear grey sea
To the soft, slow hills that cherish dim waters weary for me,
Where the folk of rath and dun trail homeward silently
In the mist of the early nightfall that drips from their hair like rain."

The summer school of the Pasadena Community Playhouse Association is offering a course of practical instruction in the allied arts of the theatre at the Pasadena Community Playhouse from June 27 to August 6. It is hoped that arrangements may be made with the University of California Extension Division to grant credits for the work done at the summer art colony.

Six courses will be given. Dr. Richard Burton of the University of of California will give a course in dramatic writing, theatrical and practical. Frayne Williams will give a series of lectures on play construction, stage decoration and other phases of the modern theatre, and will also conduct a course in dramatic interpretation. Louise Stone, also of the University of California, will give instruction in costume design. Hope Knapp will have charge of dramatic dancing and pantomime, and Arthur Farwell of community music and community drama.

Weekly assemblies for students and their friends will be addressed by faculty members and outside speakers, and the final week of the session will be devoted to a production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle."

Ticket Sale Opens For Forest Theatre

The sale of tickets for "Pomander Walk" opened this morning at the Pine Cone office and the demand has been greater than any previous year, which indicates that all three performances of the Forest Theatre's opening attraction will be well attended.

Production work is also well advanced. Miss Katharine Cook announces that the cast is rehearsing regularly, and the stage has already assumed a decidedly English accent.

The request for community cooperation in providing growing plants for the play has met with enthusiastic response, and many offers from Carmel residents have been registered. The flowers for the walk will be loaned by the people from various sections of Carmel, while the entire coloring of Pomander Lane will be furnished from the beautiful gardens of the Monterey Nursery. Mr. W. H. Todd has generously offered the use of his blossoms and accepted the responsibility of coloring one section.

Arthur Cyril has settled down to his task of producing the childrens' play which will follow "Pomander Walk" in this year's series. Mr. Cyril needs many children as well as students of the High School to take part in "The Confounding of the Witch," and requests that the young people of Carmel call and register at the Pine Cone office at once.

Those children who are willing to take part in the coming childrens' play, and have their parents' consent to do so, are asked to write their name, age and address plainly on a slip of paper and deposit in the registration box, which will be found on the counter at the Pine Cone office.

Movie Schedule Changed

The Manzanita Club announces the discontinuance of the Tuesday moving picture shows until July 12. It has been necessary to make this change in the present schedule in order to make the proper booking arrangements, which have not been satisfactory. Saturday and Thursday evening shows will be given until July 12, after which the Tuesday performances will be added.

Flag Day ceremonies were conducted Tuesday at the Monterey High School grounds under the auspices of the Elks Lodge in cooperation the Columbia Park Boys and the 11th Cavalry. Carmel was well represented at the exercises, which were featured by addresses by Carmel Martin, Col. J. M. Jenkins and G. M. Stewart.

Ridiculous System Should be Changed

In order to protect the citizens of this district against the loss of their property through the present deplorable system of publication in Monterey county, the Pine Cone has obtained a detailed list containing the names of many Carmel property owners who are liable to lose their possessions at public auction because the law does not provide proper means for notifying delinquents. This list for 1920 may be seen at the Pine Cone office.

The present system of informing the citizens of Carmel that their names are on the delinquent list is to publish them in a Salinas newspaper, an interesting and cleverly edited daily, issued in the county seat, but only a few copies ever reach this district.

As soon as the Pine Cone obtained the list several names were selected, and in each case the local property owners, when communicated with, were surprised to learn that their possessions had been placed in jeopardy and would most certainly have remained in ignorance of the fact through the present inefficient legalized system of notification.

This ridiculous system exists in every county in the State, and action should be started at once to provide an amendment to the law which will call for the circulation of delinquent lists throughout local districts where the taxpayers may have a fair chance to see them.

Carmel's Pueblo Aid

Carmel is responding to call of the local Red Cross Chapter for funds for the relief of the victims of the Pueblo disaster. President Harding issued an appeal to the National organization, which has extended the call to all chapters, and Dr. C. A. McCollom, local head of the Red Cross, requests that Carmel donations of any amount be left at the Pine Cone office. The American Railway Express Company will accept and forward without charge money and packages containing clothing and other supplies addressed to the Mayor of Pueblo, Colorado, or other devasted Colorado towns, or to any recognized relief association for the sufferers of the recent Colorado disaster.
